CASE FILINGS CLERK OF COURTS OFFICE

Small Claims (SC)-564 new cases filed in 2011. Small claims court may be used only for certain types of cases. Small claims cases are lawsuits when the amount claimed is $10,000.00 or less; evictions; replevins (repossession of property); garnishments of wages or bank accounts (to enforce judgments from funds owed to the debtor) when the amount owed is $10,000.00 or less. Many small claims cases filed are filed by self-represented plaintiffs and most defendants do not hire an attorney to represent them on these cases. Litigants rely on the staff to answer a lot of procedural questions on these types of cases.

Civil Litigation (CV)-357 new cases filed in 2011. Most of these cases involve complex scheduling and lengthy court or jury trials. Cases filed in this category are lawsuits when the amount claimed for property damage, personal injury, money judgments, exceeds $10,000.00; replevins with values greater than $25,000.00; garnishments of wages or bank accounts (to enforce judgments from funds owed to the debtor greater than $10,000.00); name changes; appointing guardian ad litem for settlement of cases involving minor children; wage earner actions; foreclosures and other real estate disputes; domestic restraining orders; harassment restraining orders; child or vulnerable adult restraining orders; administrative agency reviews. Foreclosure cases seem to be slowly declining as there were 169 filed in 2008, 161 filed in 2009, 154 filed in 2010 and 143 in 2011.

Misdemeanor (CM)-575 new cases filed in 2011. These are criminal offenses considered less serious than a felony. Misdemeanor defendants generally are sentenced to pay a fine and put on probation or a limited local jail term. The number of cases filed understates the workload since many of the probation cases come back to court because probation is revoked or probation is extended due to conditions set by the court not being completed.

Criminal Felony (CF)-172 new cases filed in 2011. These crimes are of a graver nature than a misdemeanor, usually punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary for more than a year and/or substantial fines. The increase in this type of case from 131 in 2009 is due to drug activity and burglaries that have resulted in charges being issued.

Municipal Forfeiture Actions (FO)-359 new cases filed in 2011. These actions involve violations of municipal laws other than traffic.

Traffic Cases (TR)-3299 new cases filed in 2011. Every citation filed is entered into the CCAP (Consolidated Court Automated Program) system. These cases are concluded through default, stipulation, dismissal, court trial or jury trial. This office collects and receipts the forfeitures, and properly disburses the funds to the state, county and municipalities.

Family Cases (FA)-126 new cases filed in 2011. These cases mainly involve divorce/custody disputes. Case numbers filed understate the workload due to post judgment hearings. These hearings are calendared under the original case number; therefore, they are not counted as new cases. Post judgment hearings involve additional filing of documents, scheduling and court time. In 2006 the Wisconsin State Court website offered on-line divorce forms, so we have seen a steady increase of self-represented litigants. The self-represented cases have increased the amount of time court staff spends filing new cases, answering procedural questions and filing of documents within the case.

Paternity Cases (PA)-62 new cases were filed in 2011. These cases are filed to adjudicate paternity, health care coverage and child support orders. The case numbers filed again understate the workload due to post judgment hearings. They also are calendared under the original case number; therefore, they too are not counted as new cases and involve additional filing of documents, scheduling and court time

Incarcerated Persons (IP)-6 new cases were filed in 2011. These are cases filed by prisoners seeking to commence, prosecute or defend an action or proceeding under Sec. 814.29(1m) without payment of costs and fees.

Complex Forfeitures (CX)-4 new cases were filed in 2011. These are actions that because of their complex nature require access to the rules of civil procedure. A CX case is typified by action brought by the Environmental Protection Unit of the Department of Justice, but could be brought by any government agency, such as Waushara County Zoning Office for zoning violations.

John Doe Proceedings (JD)-4 new cases filed in 2011. These are cases that can be filed by the district attorney or any person that believes that a crime has been committed.

There are currently about 212 accountings that are filed on a yearly basis.

Probate Cases (PR)-91 new cases filed in 2011. These cases involve the settling of estates after death. Some cases involve formal proceeding before the court, some cases are informal proceeding, which do not require court hearings, and some estates are settled through summary settlement, summary assignment, and ancillary proceedings. Probate trusts need to have annual accounts filed. There are currently 58 accountings that are filed on a yearly basis.
